

South Carolina’s response to the silent epidemic of dental disease was to assemble a group of interested and committed stakeholders to guide the process of increasing recognition of oral health issues among policy makers and the public. The South Carolina Oral Health Coalition (SCOHC) was formed (2003).

Membership requirements include:

- Coalition members are expected to consistently attend quarterly advisory summits (QAS) or meetings lasting no more than 2 hours.
- Coalition members are expected to work within a workgroup in accordance with the priorities established by the South Carolina Oral Health Advisory Council and directly related to the State Oral Health Plan.
- Coalition members are expected to participate and support activities that are related to the established priorities and that promote oral health.
